

Racism is not welcome here

In Fingal, we care about our neighbourhoods and environment. We have travelled to other places but call Fingal home.

We are proud of our history, national and international, a history of fighting for freedom and justice.

We share a desire to live in safe, successful, creative communities, and we are doing our bit to grow them.

We want the next generation to live in strong and vibrant united communities, where they feel at home.

We know that issues of housing, health and employment need attention from government.

We know that scapegoating and fearmongering won't solve those issues.

Ireland has not been immune to those who promote far-right, supremacist ideologies, seeking to divide communities and set people against each other. We want to make sure this toxic racism doesn't take root in our local communities, spreading fear and hatred. United and inclusive communities have the strength to work for a decent future for everybody.
