

In Fingal, we care about our neighbourhoods and environment. We have travelled to other places but call Fingal home.

We are proud of our history, national and international, a history of fighting for freedom and justice.

We share a desire to live in safe, successful, creative communities, and we are doing our bit to grow them.

We want the next generation to live in strong and vibrant united communities, where they feel at home.

Some people may try to make us fear each other, but we are neighbours.

We know that issues of housing, employment and health need attention from government.

We know that scapegoating and fearmongering won't solve those issues.

We won't vote for fear or hate this election.

We are Fingal together.

Are you with us?

Fingal anti-racism group calls on election candidates to sign anti-racism pledge

A new anti-racism group, Fingal Communities Against Racism (FCAR) has urged all candidates standing in the Fingal election to sign up to the Anti-Racism Election Protocol. The Protocol commits candidates to conduct their election campaigns in such a way that they do not incite hatred or prejudice on the grounds of ‘race’, colour, nationality or ethnic or national origin, religious belief and membership of the Traveller or Roma Communities.

Unfortunately, Ireland has not been immune to those who promote far-right, supremacist ideologies, seeking to divide communities and set people against each other. This includes attempts to make immigrants into scapegoats for the failure of governments to enact policies that would provide homes and healthcare for all Fingal residents. We want to make sure this toxic racism doesn’t take root in our local communities, spreading fear and hatred. United and inclusive communities have the strength to work for a decent future for everybody.

Signing this Protocol gives candidates an opportunity to send a clear message to voters that they reject racism, all forms of discrimination and hate speech”.

FCAR represents Fingal residents who value the strength of our diverse communities and our neighbours, friends and colleagues of various nationalities, ethnicities, religious and cultural backgrounds who have chosen to make Fingal home. #FingalTogether
